

KIDS COUNT - a joint project of the Annie E. Casey Foundation and Kansas Action for Children – provides statistical data on the education, health and economic well-being of Kansas children and their families. Utilizing KIDS COUNT, policymakers and community leaders are empowered to make data-driven decisions that will improve the lives of Kansas children and ensure the future prosperity of our state.

KIDS COUNT is made possible in Johnson County through our county partner, United Community Services of Johnson County.

United Community Services (UCS) is a unique provider of informed community-based planning. Since 1967, it has worked to mobilize the necessary resources to address human service needs facing people living and working in Johnson County, Kansas. By creating successful alliances between human service providers, policymakers, funders and community leaders, UCS ensures the human service impact surpasses the accomplishments of a single entity.

UCS provides information, trends-analysis and documentation to enhance community-wide planning and decision-making. UCS leadership shapes more effective approaches to prepare for and meet the community's most critical needs by convening and mobilizing community partners, advocating for policy choices that promote positive outcomes for people, and leveraging resources to increase service capacity.

The difference between the state-level poverty rates depicted in the pie graph and the county-level poverty rates indicated above is due to the data year. To compare the county's poverty rate with that of its peer counties and the state, use the Poverty (County-Level) row in the Economic Success Indicators section above. If you are only referencing state poverty rates, use the more recent state-level data available in the pie graph.
